

AMERICA UNEQUAL

Taking on Economic Inequality and Race

By some measures, America is the most unequal it's been in nearly a hundred years. What does that mean for the election? And, what, if anything, should the next President do about it?

DOMINIQUE APOLLON

Race Forward: The Center for Racial Justice Innovation

Dominique Apollon, Ph.D. is the research director of Race Forward, an organization committed to advancing racial justice through research, media, and practice. He will address race and economic inequality, and the possibility of cross race coalitions.

DAVID GRUSKY

Stanford University, Sociology

Professor David Grusky will explore the current trends in inequality influencing the presidential race. He is the director of the Stanford Center on Poverty and Inequality. He is the author of Social Stratification (2014), Occupy the Future (2013), and The Inequality Puzzle (2010).

SEAN REARDON

Stanford University, Graduate School of Education

Sean Reardon is a Professor of Poverty and Inequality in Education whose research investigates issues racial/ethnic and socioeconomic disparities in academic achievement and educational success. He will discuss education's impact on the upcoming election.

Monday, November 7, 7:00pm-8:50pm
NVIDIA Auditorium (Huang Engineering Center), Stanford University
Free and Open to the Public